Working together for healthy, respectful and fair sport!

The seven principles of the Charter for Ethics in Sport

1 Equal treatment for all!

There must be no discrimination on the basis of nationality, age, gender, sexual orientation, social background, religious or political affiliations.

2 Sport in harmony with the social sphere!

The demands of training and competition must be compatible with education, work and family life.

3 Encouragement of personal and shared responsibility!

Athletes must be actively involved in decisions affecting them.

4 Respectful encouragement, not excessive pressure!

Sporting goals must not be achieved at the expense of the physical or psychological well-being of athletes.

5 Teaching fairness and environmental responsibility!

Athletes must behave with respect for each other and the environment.

6 Against violence, exploitation and sexual assault!

Prevention without misguided taboos: be alert, raise awareness and intervene rigorously.

7 Rejection of drugs and addictive substances!

Provide continuous information and intervene immediately in the event of consumption.

Sport brings people together.
From all over the world and each in his or her unique way.

Ethics in sport may not be a widely-discussed issue,
but it is the most important one.

Swiss sport has a clear foundation stone.

The Charter for Ethics in Sport

... for the SPIRIT of SPORT is the highest basic principle for Swiss sport. Wherever it appears, it reminds us that sport depends on sportsmanship.

... for the SPIRIT of SPORT sums up what the Charter for Ethics in Swiss Sport demands. Its seven principles for healthy, respectful and fair sport are an obligation for everyone in sport.

... for the SPIRIT of SPORT is applied by Swiss Olympic and the Federal Office of Sport (FOSPO) where sportsmanship is practised visibly and consistently.
